The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA): What Every Business Should Know

What is the ADA?

The ADA is a civil rights law that protects people with disabilities in the areas of healthcare, employment, public accommodations, state and local government services, and telecommunications.

What is required under the ADA?

The ADA requires businesses to provide reasonable accommodations to people with disabilities in order to ensure that their services are accessible to all. This includes access to effective communication, such as interpreting services, for people who are deaf or hard-of-hearing. Accommodations must be provided at no cost to the person being served.

Are there tax credits available to help cover the cost?

Yes. Qualifying businesses can claim a credit of up to 50% of eligible annual expenditures that exceed $250, but do not exceed $10,250.
